Catalonia
A panel information session about Spain's current political turmoil

Tuesday, February 13
5:15 pm - 6:45 pm | Cone 210-A

In Spain, in October 2017, the regional government of Catalonia called for a referendum for independence. Days later, the Catalan president declared independence. Those resolutions were illegal within the framework of the Spanish Constitution. The central government of Spain took measures such as shutting down the Catalan government and calling for elections in the Catalan parliament. After the election last December, with a tight result between independent and unionist parties, the confrontation is still central in Catalan politics and society.

Featuring the following panelists:

Dr. Pilar Blitvich, Dept. of English
Dr. Juan Meneses, Dept. of English
Dr. Julian Montoro-Rodriguez, Gerontology Program
Dr. Monica Rodriguez, Dept. of Languages and Culture Studies
Dr. Oscar de la Torre, Dept. of Africana Studies

Moderator: Dr. Hugo Pascual Bordon, Dept. of Languages and Culture Studies

Sponsored by:
Department of Languages and Culture Studies
Latin American Studies Program